Evidence for homologous regulation of the human contactin 1 and contactin 2 genes by the c-Fos and -Jun proteins. As members of the Ig-CAM family, contactins are expressed in various kinds of tissues and are involved in cellular interactions. These proteins are known to regulate cell-cell adhesion and to modulate the signaling activity of other CAMs. In this study, we examined the possible homologous regulation of the human contactin 1 and contactin 2 genes by the c-Fos and -Jun proteins using chimeric cDNA constructs. Chimeric cDNA constructs containing c-Fos or c-Jun binding sites placed upstream of the contactin promoter were assayed by dual-luciferase reporter assays. Our results demonstrate that c-Fos and c-Jun reciprocally regulate contactin 1 and contactin 2 genes independently through Sp1 sites.
