Anyone who is looking for an originalÂ .Q: Use gparted to check if hard drive has errors? I read a lot of online articles which tell me to use gparted, which seems to be a good software to do it. But one thing that I still don't understand, is that why is gparted checking if my disk is ok? If I don't have errors then why is gparted trying to fix it? Can I use gparted to check if there are any errors or is it for fixing errors only? A: gparted is a partitioning tool. It is used to visualize the hard disk partitions and to manage the partitions. It's used by root to do this. When booting from the live usb, or the live cd, gparted is used by the start-up routines to make sure that the partitioning isn't corrupted. James A.
