Tron Wiki Customers have spent years developing and testing software on the Tron Wiki platform, allowing them to trade and sell Tron programs, technologies, data and other items based on the blockchain. The platform includes a Tron Wallet, a Tron Exchange, the Tron Wiki Library and Marketplace. The Tron Community's overall content upload rate in 2017 averaged a significant 41 TPS.

The TPS rate is the number of items uploaded to the platform in a given year, multiplied by the total number of transactions that year. Content creation tools are laid out in an intuitive timeline and there's a slide-based wizard designed for beginners. The GitHub integration enables devs to collaborate with each other, and the platform allows for security tokens to be used with the Tron Network. Daedalus is a distributed ledger technology (DLT) ecosystem, built on the Ethereum blockchain. It is natively designed for the development of decentralized applications (dApps) without blockchain infrastructure, and thus, is suitable for both new and experienced developers. The platform is comprised of five independent layers which include: the Smart Contracts, the Developers, the Dappstore, the People and the News. Generally, the Smart Contracts layer consists of two parts: The Dappstore and the People, while the Developers and the Dapps store find homes in the People and the Dapps layers. You can buy and sell digital assets, participate in airdrops and try out dapps, all with the help of the Dapps store. Additionally, you can vote for dapps, make reviews, and participate in bounties. The Dapps store is accessed through Daedalus and it has a number of quality criteria that dapps must be aware of while they are being developed. Additionally, the current tasks the platform can help you out with include: Tronscan support Attaching multi-sig to tokens Setting multisig signatures Help with solving programming bugs Improving interaction with the Ethereum blockchain Improving security and stability 09e8f5149f
