Thoughts from an optimistic, optimistic global conservationist Main menu Post navigation Meet the Winners The proposals that have been submitted for Kew's Green Plans 2017: an ambitious programme of plant conservation across the world were judged by an expert panel of botanists and conservation experts. The winners of the Awards for Excellence were announced at an event held at Kew's Millennium Seed Bank on 8th July. The winners were selected from the 132 proposals from all over the world received by our international Kew's Award for Excellence programme. The winners all come from an important and supportive group of countries and are spread across continents. The green plans would deliver a range of conservation-related and sustainable actions, which would collectively benefit plants. A key part of the awards process was to provide the opportunity for different groups of stakeholders, representing a wide variety of countries and situations, to provide their personal viewpoints to our experts. Such a process gave weight to the proposals that had received the highest number of nominations. Nurses' attitudes toward and provision of care to women at different stages of pregnancy. Attitudes of forty-one nurses toward care for women throughout pregnancy were measured by using the Kardex-5 Scale, and the nurses' management of three physiological variables was also assessed. Scores related to both attitudes toward and provision of care to women throughout pregnancy were highly significant for both the total sample and the nurses who have had children. The findings indicated that most nurses possessed pro-natal attitudes and would care for the mother and infant as if these were their own children. The nurses were found to be significantly more effective managers than were doctors in three of the four specialties. which show the origin of these fields is evident: the resulting field is determined from the time-dependent solution to the mode equation

$$\omega_{lm}(t) = \omega_{lm}^0 e^{-i\omega_{lm} t} + \int_0^t dt' \dot{\omega}_{lm}(t') e^{-i\omega_{lm}(t-t')}$$

The ansatz  $A_l(t) = A_l^0 e^{-i\omega_{lm} t}$  leads to  $\omega_{lm} = A_l^0$
