This entry was originally authored by DJ White, a graphic designer and photographer from Massachusetts. When I began taking photography classes in high school in the late 1990s, the standard instruction for "basic" portraits was "develop in the darkroom, print them in the printing lab, and then red-eye fix in Adobe Photoshop." While it was a method worth pursuing for portraits, I was frustrated by the inefficiency of having to use two separate software packages to produce the final product. How do you fix someone's eyes without Photoshop? By the time I was in college, digital photography had arrived and many photographers were using Photoshop. However, I decided to pursue my interest in filmmaking and photography at the same time. I have always found it easiest to take multiple processes and mix them within the same picture to mix the styles of my two artistic pursuits. After watching a documentary on the life of David Lynch, I began to use only one software package when working on my photos. Later, I met a software editor for graphic designers who told me he used just one, and he was surprised that it was Photoshop. I decided to forget about controlling image quality with the help of multiple tools and let Photoshop focus on blending my still images with motion. Later, I had friends who asked me to edit their pictures so that their baby would have a smile in a picture. I was able to combine several of my designs into one picture and export the digital version so that they could show their friends. I'll talk more about this later. Still Life with Montage After editing multiple frames of a time lapse video, I thought it would be fun to create a montage of different frames of the time lapse video. After shooting a still photo of each frame, I wanted to create a montage with the photos that I could use to show my friends how I created the time lapse montage. I first created a still photo of each frame of the time lapse video. I then added the still photos as layers to a separate window in Photoshop Elements. After combining the layers into the same window, I then deleted each layer, except one, and then added a background layer. This enabled me to add a text layer, and I wrote a caption that said "Photo montage by DJ White." I renamed the original time lapse file, repositioned it on the timeline so that my caption text was visible 05a79cecff

The present invention relates to a useful and economical laser beam alignment device and method. Laser beam alignment devices are currently available for aligning the beam path of a laser at desired locations and for detecting and correcting the position of the alignment device itself. One example of a prior art alignment device of this type is shown in copending application Ser. No. 07/848,812 entitled, "Laser Device with Alignment System," filed on Mar. 30, 1992, and assigned to the assignee of the present application. Off-Frequency Catch-Outs The TDR alarm system can be turned on or off using a simple switch. If TDR is turned off by using the off frequency catch-out, then the TDR alarm will not respond to the frequency that is used to detect intrusion. However, if TDR is turned on and the alarm is still turned off, the alarm will still respond to the open loop currents associated with TDR testing. There is a high frequency extension on the yellow control box. The alarm will respond if the yellow box is activated. Yellow Switch The yellow switch is used to turn on or off TDR. The yellow switch is only used to turn on TDR. Red Switch The red switch is used to turn on TDR and then enable the TDR alarm. The red switch is only used to turn on TDR and then enable the TDR alarm. Alarm Stops The alarm system will stop automatically after the alarm condition has been met or for a set period of time. In the event of a power outage, if the system has reached a status called alarm STOP, the system will automatically reset itself and stop the alarm condition. After the system restarts, the alarm will fire again when the TDR alarm condition is met. TDR Alarm Outputs The following t be read from t his panel. Yellow TDR alarm ON. Red TDR alarm ON. LED and Red TDR alarm testing has been completed. LED and Green TDR alarm testing has been completed. Green TDR alarm reset cycle completed. LED Alarm Outputs The following can be read from this panel. LED The LED will illuminate when TDR is tested. LED [Current status of voice disorders in patients with chronic obstructive pulmonary disease and their relation to psychological factors]. To understand the current status of voice disorders in patients with chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD) and their relationship to psychological factors. Two hundred and ninety two COPD patients in the stable stage were divided into three groups (104, 85 and 109 patients each) in accordance with a number of symptoms reported during outpatient visits. An audio-polygram and the voice range profile (VRP) test were performed on the patients to evaluate their voice status. Self-rating anxiety scale (SAS) and self-rating depression scale (SDS) were employed to evaluate the patients' psychological status. The incidence of voice disorders among the three groups was 58.8%, 34.1% and 50%, respectively. Among the three groups, the incidence of hoarseness in patients with severe dyspnea and severe fatigue was higher than those of patients with mild dyspnea and mild fatigue. A significant correlation was found between hoarseness and dyspnea (P
