While the biggest change to the game is the introduction of the “HyperMotion Technology,” EA has also made changes to the game engine, and has addressed two key issues that have been discussed extensively by the FIFA community this year - touch control accuracy and ball controls. While FIFA has seen many improvements over the past few years, FIFA 20 raised a few eyebrows when it completely removed the ability to control the ball with a mouse and keyboard. It was an unpopular change, but the reason for the change was justified. The problem with mouse/keyboard controls is that they lack the precision that can be achieved when manipulating a ball with the physical version of a mouse. Not only does this make for a different type of control, it also limits the player’s ability to move the ball in different directions quickly and precisely. FIFA 20 players loved the ball controls until they got frustrated with it. As well, they reported that it was difficult to control the ball in slippery conditions, such as rain or snow. In addition, controls were hampered when players were playing online. In FIFA 22, the ball controls have been completely revamped, and EA has addressed both of these issues by adding “Finer Touch Controls” and “Quick Touch Accuracy.” Finer Touch Controls allows players to move the ball in all directions more quickly by creating a sense of ‘clutching’ the ball as it passes through space. Players are able to use those control to perform their own personal dribbling and flicking techniques. Quick Touch Accuracy in FIFA 22 gives players the ability to control the ball with a greater sense of finesse. The need to move the ball in a certain direction has been eliminated. In addition to these new control options, the game now also supports the mouse and keyboard. Players who are using the mouse and keyboard to control their game can also adjust the position of their camera to get the best view of the ball on the pitch. One of the core strengths of FIFA comes from the ability of the game to consistently reproduce the exhilarating real-life football feeling (“REAL Feel” as EA refers to it) on the pitch. The FIFA community has been vocal about their desire to experience this authentic feeling in a more modern way. Players have stated that they wished that they could use a mouse and keyboard when playing online, and EA has even published a cheat to allow players to Add superstars and iconic club moments to your Ultimate Team and grow a club that represents your own style of play. A New Commentary Crew – We've brought in new, younger commentators for EA SPORTS Football and new voices to call the action for FIFA 22. Improved Player AI – Players react to actions made by their teammates, adapt to the ball situation at hand and adjust their play accordingly. Updated Player Movement – Sliding, ball control, speed, acceleration and top speed are all being tuned to allow players to move more naturally in the game. Improved Freekick Aerial Accuracy – A new airborne behavior has been introduced, allowing players to go higher. The new freekick options will allow players to better control their flight paths and score more goals from distances and angles. Controller Support Improvements – Players will be able to use the left analog stick to perform new actions such as double-kicks, feints and swipes during Cruyff turns. The newly added Tackling AI is designed to reduce the risk of accidental collisions, while the new Conditioning AI reduces the risk of injury and fatigue. Praise for FIFA 20 and Beyond "A tremendous update to a top-tier FIFA title, it will keep you hooked for many hours." - IGN The upgrade to the all-powerful FIFA 20 Ultimate Edition is a long-anticipated one, with new features, improvements to gameplay and online functionality, and three new football leagues. New to FIFA Ultimate Edition is Pro League, an extension of the Premier League that gives players a place to immerse themselves in a number of stadium-related challenges. The new league features a new set of stadiums that change with the play-by-play of the season, and each club has their own attributes and challenges to face. Players can also compete as the Hong Kong Football Club in the FIFA 20 Tournament of Clubs, or take on other Ultimate Team rivals in Knockout Mode. New to FIFA Ultimate Edition is the introduction of Precision Dribbling, which is based on success rates within specific segments of a player's touch. As you use the ball more, your success rates improve with each touch. This feature allows players to become more creative in the final third. Praise for FIFA 20 "This year it's all about letting go. You won't just walk through this year's World Cup, you'll care about every pass, every foul, every tackle, every goal. And
