How to Learn Photoshop in a Month You can save lots of time by investing in a web-based tutorial site. In recent years, the number of tutorials on the market have exploded and many sites offer Flash-based interactive guides on the computer screen. These sites use a single video that can be broken up into smaller bits of information. Although this is a fantastic option if you are a pro, it can also be very time-consuming if you have to learn all the commands on your own. Another popular option is to watch narrated videos that teach you a set of commands in a shorter amount of time. There are so many good sites on the internet that it's hard to know which one to listen to. You can always look for the reputation of the video creator and editor to help you make a decision. Another avenue to go is to watch YouTube tutorials. The sheer volume of tutorials that are on YouTube allows you to find ones that are created by high-quality artists. We especially like Jakob Rosén's YouTube channel since it offers almost 100 videos of Photoshop tutorials that are just five minutes long each. Still, just watching a video without understanding what you're doing can take a lot of time. Photoshop is a tricky program to get used to, so it's best to take your time and learn it thoroughly. Another option is to simply read written tutorials, since the best guides are usually written by a pro. If you're not sure which tutorials to read, check the reputation of the site, since that will give you an idea of whether it's worth your time to read it. A few examples of great tutorial sites that offer good written Photoshop tutorials include: The best way to learn Photoshop is by reading tutorials, watching videos, and checking out other sites. You should expect to spend some time reading these tutorials before you can begin your experiments. It's best to make sure that you read these tutorials to be sure that you understand what you're doing before you begin working. Practical Tips for Photoshop Users Photoshop has a lot of features, and before you can start modifying an image, you need to understand how Photoshop uses layers to work. Canada's banking regulator is calling on its national bank-branch network to hire more bilingual staff to accommodate the country's growing Asian population. In a new report released Friday, the Canadian Bankers Association estimates Canada's Asian population will almost double by 2040 to 10.6 million from 5.4 million in 2016. The association also predicts that banks will add an average of 1,200 new customers every week from Asia. According to the report, some B.C. banks have already begun attracting new business from China. (Darryl Dyck/Canadian Press) The CBC News Network's Diana Fries reported Friday that the association warned banks that it will become increasingly important for branches to be able to speak to Asian customers in their mother tongue. "The great majority of our branches are English-only," association president Fred Noble said. "That's a concern for the industry, but with the growing inbound migration of people from Asia, and the number of people who are learning English and need to make themselves known to banks in Canada, it's a bigger concern for the industry." In 2016, Canadian banks had a combined 6.3 million banking customers, and by 2024, that figure is expected to increase to 7.2 million. According to the association, 42 per cent of the foreign banking customers of the country's 10 largest banks are already located in Canada. China and India are the largest regions, accounting for nearly a quarter of all foreign banking customers. The two other largest regions of foreign banking customers are the United States and the United Kingdom.K-ras mutation in lung cancer in Taiwan: implications for lung cancer screening. Several studies suggest that lung cancer screening (LCS) by sputum cytology and CT scan is of great value in lung cancer. However, others have shown that there was no benefit and even increased lung cancer mortality with LCS. To investigate the prevalence of K-ras gene mutation in lung cancer and its impact on LCS. The presence of K-ras mutation in 661 consecutive cases of lung cancer were screened, and the incidence of lung cancer associated with LCS in history and baseline sputum cytology was analyzed. Mutational frequency of Kras was found to be 58.2%, 19.0% and 1.8%, respectively, in cases with and without smoking history and in patients with and without a previous history of sputum cytology. Positive predictive values (PPVs) of sp [Preparation and application of fluorescent-labeled cGAS protein for its potential translational research]. This study was aimed to construct a fusion protein with functional domain of cGAS protein, which can be applied to detect the production of cGAMP and evaluate cGAS pathway in vivo. The full length of cGAS gene coding for human cGAS protein was synthesized with some modification by molecular cloning technique. From the fusion peptide of cGAS protein, the DNA sequence encoding green fluorescence protein (GFP) was inserted at the C terminus of cGAS gene by enzyme digestion. And then the fusion gene was constructed by overlap extension PCR and cloned into pcDNA 3.1 vector to produce recombinant plasmid pcDNA-cGAS/GFP. The cGAS/GFP fusion protein was over-expressed in mammalian 293T cells. And the proper expression of this fusion protein was confirmed by SDS-PAGE and western-blotting. The cellular localization of fusion protein was observed by fluorescence microscopy. Further analysis of biological function of this fusion protein was carried out in HEK293 cells and THP-1 cells. And the fluorescent dot analysis was applied to detect the response of cGAS/GFP fusion protein. The fusion peptide of cGAS protein contained the functional domain of cGAS protein and GFP that has high fluorescence efficiency, which was beneficial for the detection of expression of cGAS protein. The fusion protein cGAS/GFP could be over-expressed in 293T cells and THP-1 cells. Moreover, after LPS treatment, HEK293 cells showed rapid change of their nucleus and fluorescence dot, which can be used as an indicator to reflect the response of cGAS pathway in live cells. All these results showed that cGAS/GFP fusion protein is reliable for detecting the functional change of cGAS protein and providing an effective tool for further research of cGAS pathway in vivo.Kinesiology research into the effects of therapeutic exercise on muscles. The effects of therapeutic exercise on muscle are discussed. More than 20 types of therapeutic exercises are reviewed, each with a discussion of its current use and long-term implications. Preliminary work on muscle biochemistry indicates that exercise itself may produce changes in the appearance of cross-bridges and that a certain amount of activity may be necessary to maintain optimum performance. A chronic effect is the possibility of
