How can we prevent this from happening? I want my div inside the anchor tag to look like just an anchor tag not a block-level div. A: This is a very general question, so there are probably a lot of answers to it but here's one. If you are looking to have a "pure" looking link with no extra markup then you want to use the button class and style it yourself. CSS: .button { background-color: #000000; border-radius: 5px; } HTML: Button Clicking it will style it as you requested. Update If you want to keep the button markup but want it to be a different color you can modify the css for the.button class: .button { background-color: #000000; border-radius: 5px; background-color: #333333; } If you want the hover color to change the css is the same but on hover you'd put this: a:hover.button { background-color: d0c515b9f4
