Crack: Etiologies of chronic hepatitis B virus carriers. The role of viral factors and host immune response in liver fibrogenesis. To assess etiologic differences among chronic hepatitis B virus (HBV) carriers with normal hepatic biochemistries, those with lobular injury and those with bridging fibrosis or cirrhosis, the clinical and laboratory features were studied. Patients with perinatal or nosocomial hepatitis B surface antigenemia underwent liver biopsy and liver function studies at least twice; a total of 45 patients with chronic hepatitis B were studied. Those with normal hepatic biochemistries had intermittent episodes of prodromal symptoms of mild hepatitis that remitted spontaneously. Histologic liver bi
