I installed it on the same PC that I had previously installed Win10 on and it

didn't work! I removed EasyRE and did a repair on the PC and followed the restart process and then installed Win10. I made sure to use a USB disk as the boot disk and selected EasyRE as the OS to use. It booted to the login page but that's as far as it went - the PC was still shutdown! I've been trying to get Win10 installed on my PC via EasyRE and this far I have been unsuccessful! It installs everything ok but when it tries to reboot the PC, it locks up and I have to power off the PC from the front power switch. I can't use Windows Update or sign into a new Win10 account as the PC won't boot up! Is EasyRE suitable for installing Win10? The issue is so similar to this one which I'm hoping I've overlooked something!! A: When you said 'booted to the login screen', I'm wondering if you mean that that's the only screen that you're seeing and it's just the login screen? Do you mean that it does boot the PC and then when the screen loads and you're presented with the logon screen, there's a whole bunch of errors on the screen before it even loads anything? If you've got the Win10 installer DVD and you know you want to install Win10 then I would recommend using Win10 as your boot disk and then in EasyRE, load up the Win10 ISO and then see if it will boot. If it does, click on the Windows button and select Troubleshoot and then Endure and it should boot straight into Win10. If it doesn't boot straight into Win10, then I'd get the disk and run the Win10 Setup and see if it boots into it. In EasyRE, there's the BIOS boot menu and if you get the screen asking you about booting off DVD, there's also a screen with a boot menu where you can select either the Windows 10 boot disk or EasyRE. You can also choose a firmware reset. NOTE: If it doesn't boot straight into Win10, then it means the issue has to do with either booting off the DVD or setup. If it is not booting off the DVD, then you can either insert the CD/DVD/USB into another PC and it should boot into the setup. If it doesn't, then you can also change
