There are two tools in Photoshop that it is often difficult to know which one to use for specific tasks: the Pen tool and the Eraser tool. The Pen Tool The Pen tool is used for drawing lines, curves, and ellipses, as well as for creating closed paths. The Pen tool is very user-friendly and is considered the most efficient way to create drawing lines. The Pen tool is designed for drawing with curves and arcs, as well as straight lines. The Eraser tool The Eraser tool is used for erasing lines, curves, and ellipses. It is very similar in functionality to the Pen tool, but is used differently. It is usually used for erasing something created by another tool. The Eraser tool is mostly a shortcut for the Pen tool. They are designed to be used for creating or modifying lines, paths, and polygons. Photoshop can function as a "raw" or "file format" imaging software. Raw files (also known as PSD files) store the raw data from a photograph, which means that the image is not altered or processed in any way. This gives you a chance to go into the file and modify each pixel, but, the downside is that you lose your ability to print your image. File formats are used for printing and other image processing. The formats that most image editors use to store your files include.tif,.jpg,.png, and.tiff. In this article, we will be using Photoshop CS6 on a Mac, but the concepts and functions are the same in all versions of Photoshop, so long as you have the most current version. 1. Pen Tool For the first part of this article, we will be focusing on the Pen tool for drawing and manipulating image layers. Creating a Line with the Pen Tool When you are creating lines in a layer, the Pen tool is very helpful. Once you draw your line, you can draw lines to any specific location in the image. Photoshop's drawing tools work a lot like what you would draw on paper. You pick the tool and then the stylus (the Pen tool in Photoshop) selects the pixels that you draw with. The Pen tool uses the Mouse as a stylus, meaning that you can draw lines with your mouse without having to use Photoshop's own stylus (the Pen tool).

Association between cyclin D1 expression and pTNM stage (n=45) ![(JMP-39-92-g003)] The association between the expression of cyclin D1 protein and the patients' overall survival rate was evaluated using the Kaplan-Meier survival curve \[Table 4{ref-type="table"}\]. The median survival time of the 45 patients with clear cell renal cell carcinoma who expressed cyclin D1 protein was 15 months. Using a log-rank test, it was observed that the overall survival was significantly decreased in patients with tumors expressing cyclin D1 (P = 0.002) \[Figure 1{ref-type="fig"}\]. A Cox's regression multivariate analysis was also used to determine the effects of the clinicopathologic variables on survival in patients with clear cell renal cell carcinoma. The analysis showed that the only independent prognostic factor was the expression of cyclin D1 (P = 0.026) \[Table 5{ref-type="table"}\].

Myeloperoxidase polymorphisms predict the time to acute coronary syndrome. To test whether genetic markers of neutrophilic myeloperoxidase (MPO) influences the time to acute coronary syndrome (ACS) in patients with suspected ACS. Relevant data were collected retrospectively from the Coronary Care Unit database and ACS patients between 2000 and 2010 were selected with the following inclusion criteria: age ≥ 18 years, received a diagnosis of ACS on hospital admission, verified coronary angiography, and a diagnosis of ACS. The presence of at least one variant of the 1881C/T or 2311A/G polymorphism was used to determine the neutrophilic MPO genetic polymorphism. Patients with MPO variants, who received a diagnosis of ACS during the study period, were considered to have a positive MPO genetic polymorphism. Time to ACS was defined as the time between coronary angiography and ACS. Multivariate logistic regression analysis was used to estimate the odds ratio (OR) of ACS for each MPO genetic polymorphism. Among 467 ACS patients, there were 309 (66.4%) with a positive MPO genetic polymorphism (C1881T, n=268, 58.3%; A2311G, n=139, 30.2%). Among the remaining 158 (33.6%) who did not have a MPO genetic polymorphism, 30.4% underwent coronary angiography within 1 month after the suspected ACS was discovered. The MPO genetic polymorphism was an independent predictor of the time to ACS (T0) after adjusting for other confounding factors, with the OR for T0 of 15.47 (95% confidence interval 6.13-39.64; PArtikel werden gerichtlich bezahlt und nur dann veröffentlicht, wenn es nicht zuvor mit der Veranstaltung entsprochen wurde.
