Each table is configured to have a certain number of rows per page and column width for displaying information (see below). I would like to be able to dynamically add rows and columns to these tables using jsf components. For example, say the user has a page which displays some collections of 5 records per page: Page 1 collection1: 11111111 collection2: 22222222 collection3: 33333333 collection4: 44444444 collection5: 55555555 Page 2 collection1: 11111111 collection2: 648931e174

Incidence of hepatocellular carcinoma (HCC) is rising worldwide and the fifth most common malignancy. HCC is associated with significant morbidity and mortality. Early diagnosis is the only hope for improving outcomes. Sustained surveillance, which requires repeat imaging, is the mainstay of HCC screening and diagnosis. As a result of improvements in screening test performance, HCC is now increasingly diagnosed at a treatable and potentially curable stage. It is imperative that patients with cirrhosis are assessed for liver disease and cirrhosis risk using validated risk prediction models; this will allow clinicians to prioritize surveillance according to the patients' treatment options, as well as to identify individuals who are at highest risk.

Q: Javascript date histogram I would like to build a time histogram of some type. So the end output would be something like this: So as you can see, the X axis is in hours, and the Y axis is a count of how many times the hour was selected. Can someone help me on how I could do this with Javascript.

A: Assuming that you want just the current date, and that you can convert the
